Rationale behind Changes to the Faculty Senate Constitution

II. B. Changes are based on current practice. Also indicates when certification of voting units occurs.

C. 1. Changes specify that faculty on special appointment can’t serve on the Faculty Senate since they may not be fully informed about certain university issues discussed in the Senate. Faculty on special appointment are counted in determining the number of members of each voting unit.

C. 2. Changes are for clarification.

E. Changes are based on the current practice.

III. A. 1. a. Change is based on current academic calendar.

A. 1. c. Change establishes another back-up plan in case the Faculty Senate President is absent from a particular Faculty Senate meeting.

A. 1. d. Elections to replace a Senate President that is unable to complete a term would be done by the chair of the Elections Committee, which runs all Senate related elections. The chair of the Technology committee is now added to the list of senators that could serve temporarily if the Senate President is unable to complete a term.

A. 1. e. This statement was unnecessary.

A. 3. b. This statement was unnecessary.

A. 4. a. Change is based on the current academic calendar.

A. 4. c. This statement was unnecessary.

IV. C. Statement was removed since the Freedom of Information Act dictates when Senate meetings can be open or closed.

V. Changes reflect current practice.

VI. First paragraph was moved under Faculty Initiative for clarification. Referenda will now involve full-time faculty (tenured faculty and coaches) but not faculty on special appointments or part-time faculty. Although the Senate recognizes the important contributions of all faculty to the University, the Senate felt that there were good reasons for not including some faculty in certain referenda. Some of the reasons given included: a constant changing population of faculty on special appointments or part-time positions; a large population of part-time faculty/faculty on special appointments in certain departments that could heavily influence election results; part-time faculty/faculty on special appointments may not be engaged and may not have the same stake with certain issues. Nonetheless, the Senate felt that it was important to provide a mechanism for including part-time faculty and faculty on special appointments in faculty referenda when an issue would directly impact them. The threshold for the minimum of faculty voting for a referendum to be valid was lowered to 200 even in referenda that involve part-time faculty and faculty on special appointments since there would likely be a lower number of full-time faculty participating. The Senate felt that it was important to maintain a threshold to avoid the potential of a referendum being held in secrecy or at odd times during the year.

VII. B. Changes give faculty the right to ask for a referendum when the Senate refuses to act upon a petition by the faculty at-large. It also clarifies that the procedure listed under section VI. is followed in referenda initiated by the faculty.

VIII. A. 3. Section VIII. A. 2. is now two separate items since the approval by 2/3 of Senators is not related to whether the vote takes place or not.

VIII. B. The Senate felt that it would be odd to have a different procedure than the one listed under section VI. for a referendum regarding changes to the Senate Constitution.

VIII. C. Change clarifies that appropriate notification must be provided to Senators and that at least 2/3 of Senators must be present before voting on changes to Faculty Senate By-Laws.
